

Feed the Soul

Bringing Student art to the community

▶ The Idaho Department of Education has sponsored a program to display the work of local students in their community. Students will participate through creating art to display it in public buildings.

Students receive a certificate for displaying their work, and those who see the art are encouraged to write their comments and express their response to it.

What is Feed the Soul?

The Idaho Humanities Achievement Standards express the need for students to acquire, apply, and express skills in the visual and performing arts areas. Exhibition is a vital part of expression in the visual arts. Without an audience, the artist has little voice.

Though schools often display student art in hallways and art rooms, the cities of Idaho need additional venues for displaying student art. Feed the Soul is an attempt to bring student artwork into our communities and to enhance the lives of people through art.
